SUBJECT: Establishment of Climate Clubs and Societies

Climate change has caused significant and lasting changes in Earth's weather patterns over an extended period, typically spanning decades or longer. The primary causes of climate change are largely attributed to human activities, such as the burning of fossil fuels, deforestation, industrial processes, and agricultural practices causing release of greenhouse gases such as carbon dioxide, methane, and nitrous oxide into the atmosphere. This gradual increase in global temperatures results in various impacts such as rising sea levels, extreme weather events, shifts in rainfall patterns, and disruptions to environments and biodiversity.

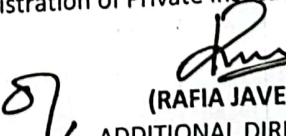

2. Environmental shifts also threaten to sustain life on Earth, risking not only the seasons and the air we breathe but also the very foundations of societies, institutions, and economies. It is incumbent upon us to anticipate the consequences of these changes on our society, educational institutions, and economic frameworks, and to chart a course of action to mitigate their impact.

3. To safeguard against the impacts of climate change and raise awareness among the youth in our society, it is advised that Climate Clubs and Societies be established at all levels of schools. Within these clubs, students should not only aware about climate change and its consequences but also be motivated to take tangible steps toward improvement, such as tree planting, fauna and flora conservation, and other measures aimed at preserving and enhancing the climate. Moreover, these climate societies and clubs should organize activities like declamation contests, poster competitions, and science exhibitions centered on environmental themes within educational institutions to effectively cultivate a culture of environmental consciousness.
